Track wants slot parlor license

Raynham Park will enter the bidding for the state's lone slots parlor license with plans to build a hotel, movie theater and bowling alley at the old dog racing track, its owner told the News Service Tuesday.

Owner George Carney said his plans envision a commuter rail stop on the long-planned extension of service between Boston and New Bedford, which has not yet been permitted or funded. METRO/SHNS

Boston pancakes tops for Esquire

BOSTON. The pancakes at the South Street Diner were named by Esquire as one of the best late-night foods in the country.

The magazine's feature said that Bostonians have done with less for centuries, especially with extremely few places serving food after closing time.

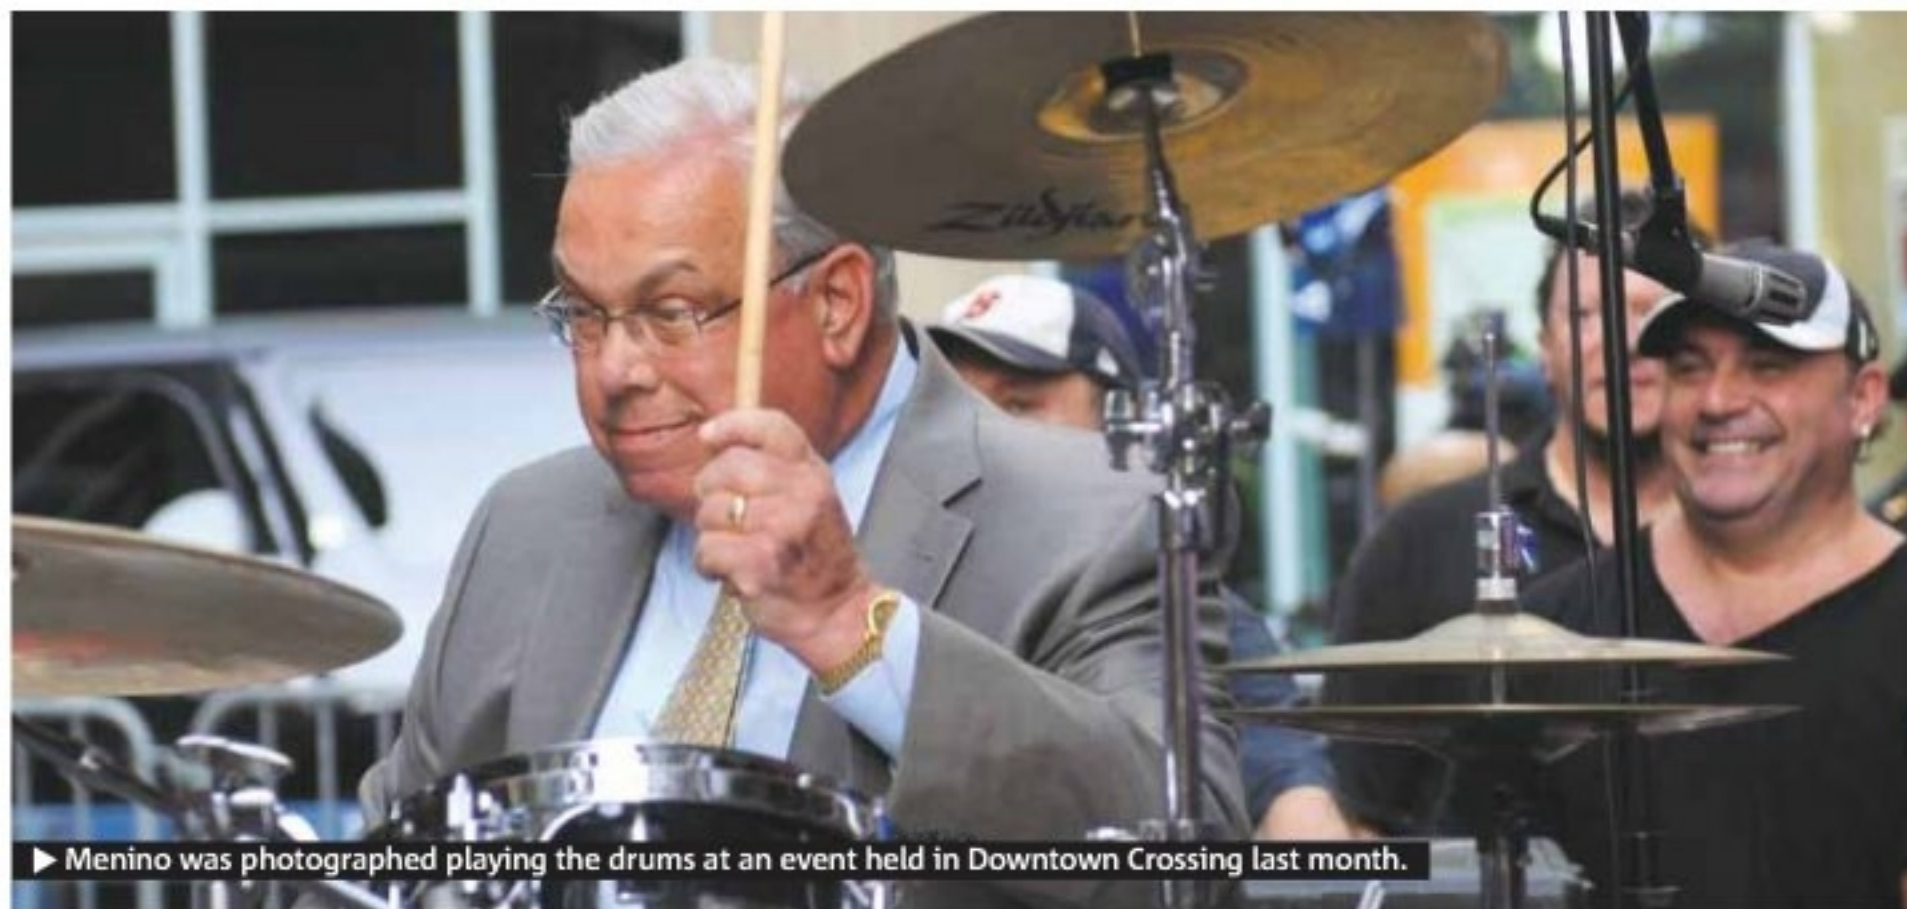

"But South Street defies the city's abstemious ways, serving up-to-the-brim plates of breakfast staples and burgers," the feature said. METRO

Patrick signs $40M budget

BOSTON. Gov. Deval Patrick on Tuesday evening approved the bulk of a final fiscal 2012 supplemental budget bill, okaying more than $40 million in spending while vetoing close to $3 million that the Legislature will not be able to override.

The bill, sent to Patrick's desk amid a chaotic final day of formal sessions last Tuesday, includes more than $15 million to help cities and towns pay emergency response efforts following the October snowstorm and Tropical Storm Irene, $10 million for information technology to improve online services and vendor payment systems and $350,000 to promote Massachusetts military bases as the federal government considers base closings. METRO/SHNS

Drumming up support

► Menino was photographed playing the drums at an event held in Downtown Crossing last month.

Richard Nixon had the piano, Bill Clinton had the saxophone and Mayor Thomas Menino apparently has the drums.

A photo of the mayor rocking out at Tuesday's National Night Out event in South Boston has been making its way around the Internet after it was posted by City Councilor Matt O'Malley on Twitter.

Menino, Boston's longest serving mayor, has hit on success recently when he took on Chick-fil-A and the chicken chain president's anti-gay marriage comments.

Some Twitter users have even taken to making memes out of the picture and tying it to his recent viral success when a letter he sent to Chick-fil-A's president was posted online.

"Sorry Chick-fil-A but these are the only drumsticks Boston needs," @stevhensays posted as his caption.

Metro did some research and found Menino apparently has an affinity for the drums. He was spotted banging out some tunes at the end of last month during a block party in Downtown Crossing.

A short video of him toying with the skins and cymbals during an event last year on City Hall Plaza has also been posted on YouTube.

Cape Cod shark attack victim explains wounds in a new video

The state's first shark attack victim in about 70 years said he feels very lucky to have made it back to the Cape Cod beach he was swimming off of when he was bitten by a great white shark.

Chris Myers, from Colorado, spoke about his injuries and thanked the doctors, nurses and staff at Massachusetts General Hospital in a video posted online this week.

Myers was swimming off of Ballston Beach in Truro with his 16-year-old son when he was bitten last week.

"I was swimming off the coast of Cape Cod and I was attacked by a great white shark, believe it or not," Myers said in the video.

He said he had eight "deep puncture wounds" on his legs and feet. It took 47 stitches to close the wounds. Some of his tendons were severed.

"It felt like I had my foot stuck in a ... vise and I knew instantly it was a shark and we started swimming as hard as we could to shore," he said.

After examining the bite wounds on Myers' legs, and interviewing him and witnesses, state officials confirmed this week that it was a great white shark that attacked him, the Globe reported. METRO/MN

Shark guide

After the most recent attack, state officials said they are working on a manual to help lifeguards and beach-goers to identify a shark.

The Cape Cod National Seashore and the state Division of Marine Fisheries said the manual is in the planning stages and could take a few weeks to complete, according to the Globe.

The manual's pages will help people identify a dorsal fin and the features of harmful animals like a great white shark, versus those of other animals found in the state's waters like whales, sunfish and even birds. METRO/MN

Company: How honest is the Hub?

PHOTOS BY NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

It was about 90 degrees yesterday near Fenway Park as people passed by an unmanned Honest Tea kiosk that flaunted a few different flavors of ice tea and a sign asking thirsty pedestrians for $1 in exchange for a tea of their choice.

It was part of National Honesty Index, a nation-wide social experiment testing 30 cities' adherence to the honor system.

As of about 1:30 p.m., roughly 40 people had taken a tea, and the vast majority of them paid, according to those who were keeping watch.

"We are tracking observable criteria this year such as hair color, gender and sports allegiances," said James Varichio, Honest Beverage's regional marketing manager of the Northeast. "Most of our results have been pretty encouraging."

When asked why people would not pay, Varichio said,

"Maybe it's the thought that no one is looking and they can get away with it. But overwhelmingly the majority of people are paying."

One tourist passing by yesterday went so far as to drop in .75 cents as a donation, without taking the tea.

"I thought it was really awesome that there is a cash box, and they trust you to just leave the money. I think probably because it is so trusting, people would pay," said Julie Bailey, adding that she had no inclination to swipe a tea.

"Not at all," she said.

In 2010, Boston was found to be the most honest city, based on the experiment.

Last year Boston came in second place, behind Chicago.

This year's results will be released on Aug. 20.

Former treasurer starts legal defense fund

MASSACHUSETTS. Former state treasurer Tim Cahill has filed documents to launch a legal defense fund to help him pay for the cost of his trial.

The fund will allow people to contribute an unlimited amount of money to help pay for Cahill's defense costs, according to the Patriot Ledger.

Cahill, of Quincy, was indicted earlier this year on violating the state ethics law, conspiracy to violate the state ethics law, procurement fraud and conspiracy to commit procurement fraud.

Cahill did have about $3 million in his campaign account, but currently has $187 and about $38,000 in liabilities, the Ledger reported.

The case related to his using money for state Lottery ads to boost his campaign for governor in 2010. ● METRO

DA: Booth battle at strip joint led to shooting

► JP man faces judge for allegedly shooting two men at strip club; ► Officials say seating argument led to gunfire

A flashback to the days of the old Combat Zone occurred yesterday as a fight broke out inside one of downtown Boston's few remaining strip clubs, leading to a burst of gunfire and leaving two men seriously wounded.

Steven Gayle, 35, pleaded not guilty during his arraignment yesterday and was ordered held on $250,000 bail. He faces charges including armed assault with intent to murder.

Two men were shot and seriously injured when Gayle allegedly opened fire inside the club.

Gayle tried to flee after the shots rang out inside the La-Grange Street club just before 2:30 a.m., police said.

At that time, a doorman pointed him out to a police officer working a detail outside the club. The officer, along with an off-duty officer in the area, followed Gayle and ordered him to put down the gun, authorities said.

"Gayle appeared to be holding something in his right hand, and the officer instructed him to 'Let me see your hands,'" the Suffolk district attorney's office said in a statement. "Gayle followed that command and placed the weapon — with its hammer still cocked and ready to fire — on the ground."

Police secured the gun and found 16 rounds of ammunition in a backpack Gayle was wearing, authorities said.

One of the victims, a 28-year-old man, was being treated as Massachusetts General

The suspect

Gayle is the owner of The Game Room, a Jamaica Plain video game parlor.

- A biography about Gayle posted on the business' website said he previously survived a shooting and has since been on disability.
- He said he is a single father of two children.
- "The money I am receiving is not enough to raise my children, pay my bills, and take care of myself, much less start a business," he wrote.

Hospital for injuries that were not life-threatening. A 31-year-old man was in critical condition at Tufts Medical Center.

Officials and lawyers said that Gayle and the men became involved in a fight when the men sat down at a booth Gayle was already seated at, according to the Globe.

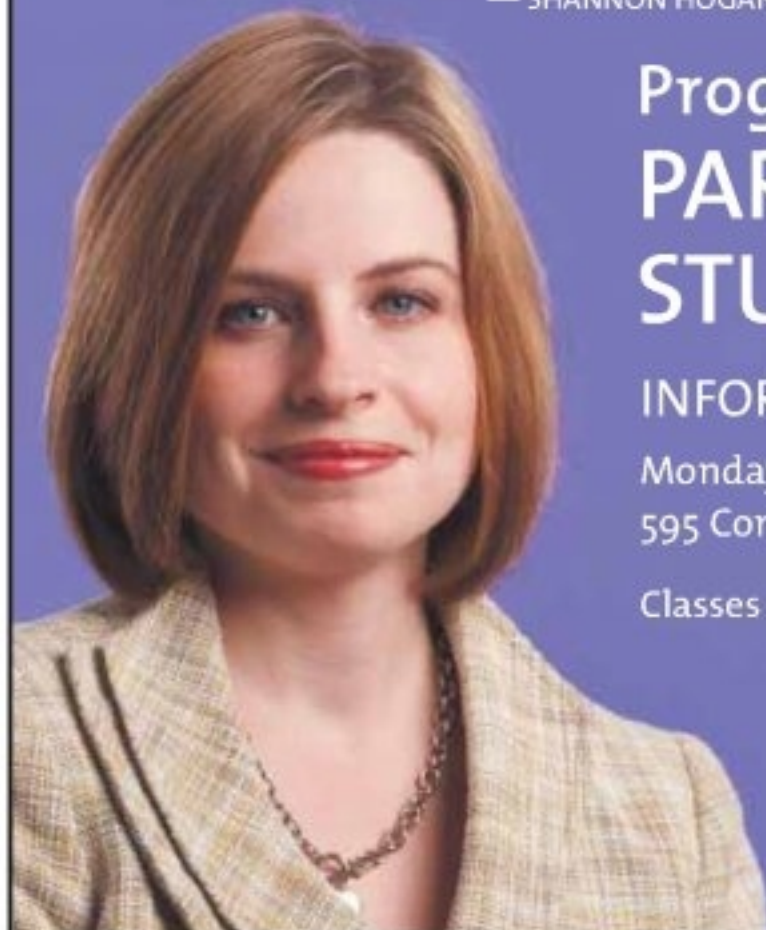

Gayle's lawyer said he was the victim of aggression, according to the Globe.

Obama's lead grows despite voter pessimism

WASHINGTON. Americans are increasingly pessimistic about the future, but voters do not seem to be holding it against Democratic President Barack Obama, who slightly expanded his lead over Republican rival Mitt Romney this month, a new Reuters/Ipsos poll says. Three months before the Nov. 6 presidential election, nearly two-thirds of Americans think the country is moving in the wrong direction. Only 31 percent say it is moving in the right direction — the lowest number since December 2011.

FBI says Wisconsin shooter killed himself

MILWAUKEE. The white supremacist gunman who killed six people at a Sikh temple in Wisconsin died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, the FBI said yesterday.

A police officer shot and wounded the gunman, Wade Page, 40, in the stomach outside the temple in Oak Creek on Sunday, said Teresa Carlson, an FBI special agent in charge.

"Subsequent to that wound, it appears that Page died from a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head," she said at a news conference.

Police had said Page had been shot to death by an officer responding to the attack at the Sikh Temple of Wisconsin in suburban Milwaukee.

July was hottest month ever for continental US

► The drought triggered a surge in the prices for U.S. corn and soybeans to record highs last month, with values rising about 50 percent and 30 percent, respectively, over the past two months.

July was the hottest month in the continental United States on record, beating the hottest month in the devastating Dust Bowl summer of 1936, the government reported yesterday.

It was also the warmest January-to-July period since modern record-keeping began in 1895, and the warmest 12-month period, eclipsing the last record set just a month ago, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said.

This is the fourth time in as many months that temperatures broke the hottest 12-month record.

The average temperature for July across the contiguous 48 states was 77.6 degrees F, or 3.3 degrees F above the 20th century average. The previous warmest July, in 1936, averaged 77.4 degrees F.

Corn projections

► The government will make its first estimate of the fall harvest on Friday. It already has cut projections for corn yields by 12 percent due to hot, dry weather in the Farm Belt.

Along with record heat, drought covered nearly 63 percent of the 48 contiguous states, according to NOAA's Drought Monitor, with near-record drought conditions in the Midwest, where 75 percent of the U.S. corn and soybean crops are grown.

Analysts expect the drought, the worst since 1956, will yield the smallest corn crop in six years, meaning record-high prices and tight supplies.

Experts surprised to discover fat burning effect in Raspberry Ketones (Canoga Park, CA) In recent scientific studies, researchers have found that raspberry ketones affect the metabolism by increasing the release of two hormones, norepinephrine and adiponectin. Norepinephrine causes the body's temperature to rise which burns more fat. Adiponectin has direct control over your metabolism. When there are high levels of adiponectin, the cells are consistently releasing rather than storing fat. Simply put, thinner people have larger amounts while obese people have significantly lower levels.

"It's a miracle fat burner in a bottle" - Dr. Oz

Research and Development

Unfortunately, it takes an extremely large amount of raspberries to produce the required amount of ketones necessary to promote weight loss so the chemists at SimplePure Nutrition went to work. Using only natural, high quality ingredients, they developed a proprietary formula specifically designed to create the perfect metabolic balance ideal for weight loss. At press time their manufacturers were working overtime to meet demand for their free* trial offer.

SimplePure offers Free Bottle

With the exception of TV's Dr. Oz declaring that Raspberry Ketones were the "miracle fat burner in a bottle", the news about this recent discovery has been limited. SimplePure Nutrition is offering a free bottle of Raspberry Ketones so consumers can see the amazing effects for themselves.

Schools pitch new degrees at job-focused students

Despite a full-time job as a mechanical engineer, Sean Whitney is carving out hours to pursue the new Johns Hopkins MBA/M.A. in "Design Leadership." Whitney believes the program, a collaboration of the Johns Hopkins Carey Business School and the Maryland Institute College of Art, will teach him management skills while he learns to think more creatively.

His goal: to open his own business designing consumer products. "I have a background in design, and this was a good way to blend the two worlds," Whitney, 31, says.

This fall, name-brand schools like Hopkins, Northwestern University, the University of Michigan and Parsons School of Design are launching cross-disciplinary masters programs meant to make students more competi-

The programs

The Hopkins program focuses on combining design and business management — an idea that has gained popularity since the Stanford Business school founded its much-admired "D-school" in 2005, with help from a donation by Hasso Plattner, co-founder of software giant SAP.

The Parsons New School for Design in New York is launching its own design MBA degree this fall, as is Philadelphia University. Programs like the one at Michigan focus on combining information technology with the issues of a particular industry. Another approach is to combine management with IT.

While colleges have always tweaked their offerings, the newest crop of programs seems particularly designed for the times: They are multidisciplinary, job focused and often influenced by private industry. They typically involve mixing creativity with management, data-crunching skills with industry-specific content and science with business and management skills.

Some of these new hybrids, especially in the sciences, allow graduates to pursue technical jobs with master's degrees rather than Ph.D.s. In other cases, they reveal the influence of private companies that are helping to fund and design the programs, presumably in ways that will produce graduates the companies want to hire. REUTERS

No hiding place: Facebook ads target mobiles

NEW YORK. Facebook users who access the site through a cell phone or tablet may soon be bombarded with ads from app developers.

Facebook announced on its developers' blog yesterday that it would charge a fee every time a user clicked on an ad to download the software from elsewhere.

Facebook has warned that its future revenues could be in danger if it could not find a way to make money out of mobile devices. Its shares have nearly halved in price since its flotation.

Facebook has invited software developers to sign up to a beta test; they can decide whether to target users of Apple's iOS App Store or Android's Google Play store. METRO

Standard Chartered begins fightback on Iran allegations

NEW YORK/LONDON. Standard Chartered won help from Britain's central bank governor in its fightback against a U.S. regulator's allegations that it hid $250 billion of transactions with Iran.

The British bank lost over a quarter of its market value after the New York State Department of Financial Services called it a "rogue institution" for breaking U.S. sanctions against Iran. But UK central bankers slammed New York regulators for issuing judgments while a joint investigation into Standard Chartered remained unfinished. REUTERS

Announcing a Public Scoping Meeting for NEC FUTURE

What will the Northeast Corridor (NEC) rail system look like in future years? How well will it function for intercity and local travelers? What will it take for the NEC to provide the service, reliability, and speeds necessary to support regional economic growth now and into the future?

Come to a public meeting to help shape the scope of study for NEC FUTURE, the Federal Railroad Administration's (FRA) planning and environmental evaluation of alternatives for improving the rail network from Boston to Washington, D.C. NEC FUTURE is being conducted in compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, and FRA's Procedures for Considering Environmental Impacts and related regulations. NEC FUTURE is the planning framework for developing a Passenger Rail Corridor Investment Plan for the NEC, comprised of a Tier 1 Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) and a Service Development Plan that will evaluate a broad range of alternatives for improving rail passenger service.

BOSTON AREA SCOPING MEETINGS

City, State	Location	Date and Time
Boston, MA	Mass State Transportation Building 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA	August 13, 2012 4:30 to 7:30 p.m.
New Haven, CT	Shubert Theater 247 College Street, New Haven, CT	August 14, 2012 4:30 to 7:30 p.m.
Providence, RI	Department of Administration One Capitol Hill, Providence, RI	August 22, 2012 4:30 to 7:30 p.m.

In support of the Tier 1 EIS, the FRA has scheduled nine public Scoping Meetings throughout the NEC. At these open house meetings, the public will have an opportunity to view project information, speak to the NEC FUTURE team, and provide written or oral comments. All meeting locations are accessible to persons with disabilities. Persons requiring special assistance should contact the project team by email at info@necfuture.com at least five days prior to the meeting. THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

Fighting the good fight: Joan Rivers

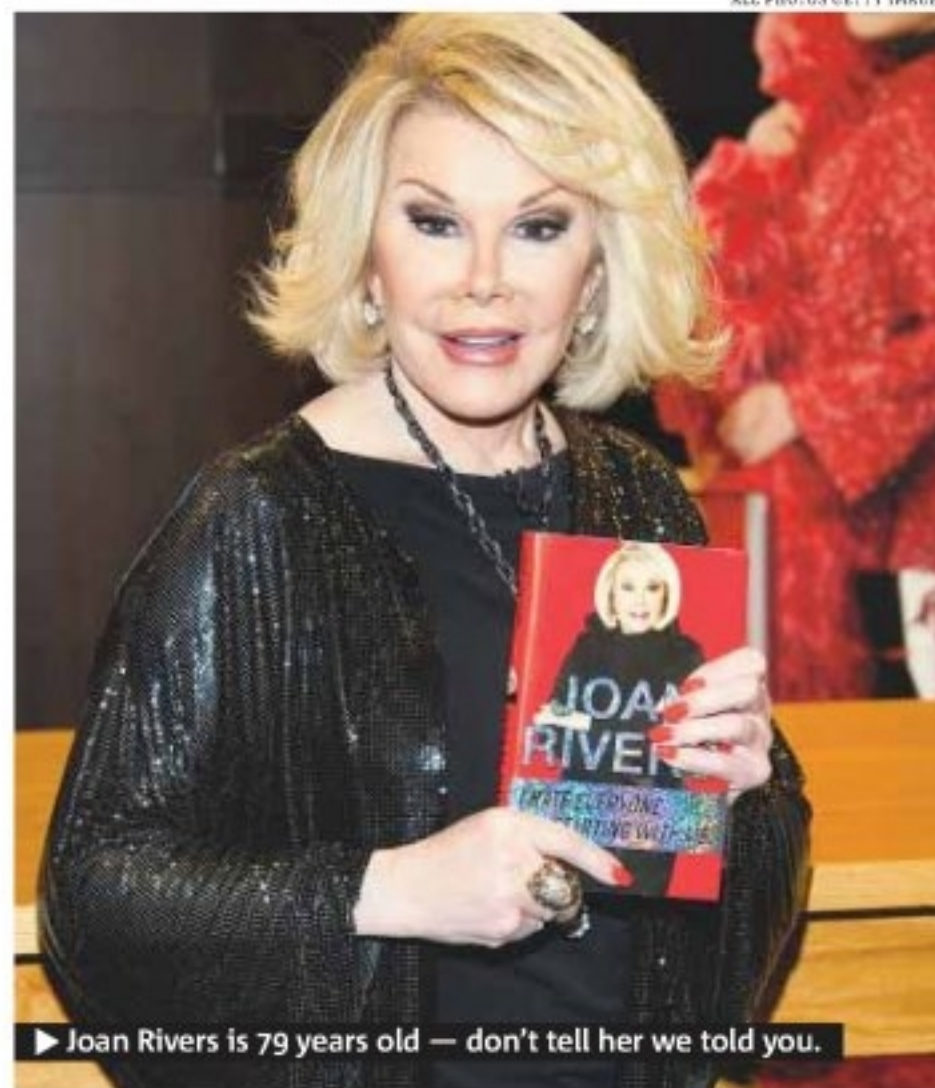

Joan Rivers, official patron saint of The Word, has been on a campaign against Costco ever since they declined to sell her new book, "I Hate Everyone ... Starting With Me." (Seems she's a little too controversial for the bulk paper towel crowd.)

But on Tuesday afternoon she took her protest to the next level, setting up outside an unsuspecting Costco store in Burbank, Calif., to air her grievances — and, of course, sell her book.

"Costco should not be like Nazi Germany. Next thing they'll be burning the Bible," she yelled into a megaphone while someone — let's call this person Best Costco Customer Ever — filmed her.

Rivers eventually took her show inside the store, where she handcuffed herself to a shopping cart with the help of customers.

"I know you're trying to throw me out of your store, but this is bigger than both of us," she told a manager, who eventually had to call police to escort her out. "This is private property that we've stolen from the Indians — the Indians are the original owners of this property."

Joan Rivers, bless us and keep us, and make your Botox-ridden face shine upon us.

Pattinson speaks!

Robert Pattinson has been lying low ever since girlfriend Kristen Stewart's very public affair with director Rupert Sanders. That said, he has a movie to promote, so next week he'll make his first appearance on the only show too classy to provide material for this column.

Catch Pattinson Monday on "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart," where he'll talk about his latest film, "Cosmopolis," before getting harassed on Wednesday's "Good Morning America."

JLo: Oh, hell no

Hakob Manoukian, Jennifer Lopez's driver, recently filed a lawsuit against the singer, claiming that he was forced to resign after being publicly embarrassed by her manager.

But now, JLo has answered with a $20 million-plus extortion countersuit, claiming Manoukian demanded money to keep her secrets from the press, reports TMZ.

We can't help but wonder: How much do you pay your driver if you sue him for $20 million? And does writing a gossip column disqualify you for the job?

Even her dog poo sparkles

Today's "Stuff Rich People Say" is brought to you by Miley Cyrus. Miley, what does your bulldog Ziggy do when acting out? "She totally ate my diamonds on purpose," Cyrus tells Marie Claire. "She was pooping them out all morning!"

Talking points

Madonna to Sir Elton John: Yawn

▶ Madonna is her own cheerleader.

Madonna has heard Elton John's expletive-filled criticism of her and her latest tour, and she isn't taking it lying down. "Ultimately, she doesn't care what he has to say about her in public or private. She has nothing to prove to anyone, especially Elton John," a source tells the Huffington Post. "To say her tour is a disaster is just silly. She is selling out arenas. [She's] singing new material and a few classic hits. [John] will be singing the same old songs until he dies."

Bob Hoskins retires

British actor Bob Hoskins announced his retirement yesterday, thanking fans for a "wonderful career" in a statement released by his agent. "Bob is now looking forward to his retirement with his family, and would greatly appreciate that his privacy be respected at this time," the statement continued. Hoskins, 69, was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease last fall. After starting in TV, he enjoyed a career in Hollywood, starring in "Who Framed Roger Rabbit." In his most recent role, he played one of the dwarves in "Snow White and the Huntsman."

py. Their eldest son, Maddox Jolie-Pitt, reportedly received a Suzuki motorbike for his 11th birthday last weekend, according to E! News. The gift was Pitt's idea, as the actor "wants the boys to be able to ride on private land," a source says.

Hathaway's big fan

Barack Obama has seen the latest Batman movie, "The Dark Knight Rises," and he knows which part he liked best: Anne Hathaway's Catwoman. "She's spectacular," Obama told reporters during a fundraiser hosted by Harvey Weinstein, according to Hollyscoop. "She was the best thing in it. That's just my personal opinion."

Stars on the picket line

Joan Rivers' Costco protest wasn't exactly political, but she did manage to accuse the chain of being Nazis and infringing on her free speech (see page 10 for more). Her fellow celebs also exercise their right to assemble:

'Totally Biased with W. Kamau Bell'

COMEDY. Chris Rock protégé W. Kamau Bell takes the FX late-night stage for an opinionated, six-episode stand-up series that tackles politics, race, religion and pop culture. "I love the fact that that title says explicitly up front there's things that you are just going to get here, and if you don't like them, that's just how it's going to be," the comedian says. Series premiere, 11 p.m., FX. AMBER RAY

Plot points

Chad Deity is the undisputed champion of the T.H.E. wrestling league, though he couldn't do it without the help of Mace, the opponent who always falls prey to his Power Bomb. The balance of power shifts, however, when Mace brings a young Indian-American man into the business.

AN 'ELABORATE ENTRANCE' INDEED!

Kristoffer Diaz's adrenaline-surge, body-slaming satire, "The Elaborate Entrance of Chad Deity" is smart and blisteringly funny, and yet rife with the kitschy appeal that wrestling fans will love.

You don't have to understand the playwright's piercing commentary on fame, fortune, race and class to enjoy Company One's finest production to date. But if you do, the dazzling costumes, flying objects and sleeper holds make the entire spectacle much more meaningful.

Director Shawn LaCount accomplishes the seemingly impossible with "Chad Deity." The production's flash, trash-talk and wrestling ring set make you feel like you're at an actual pay-per-view event. The "Elabo-rate" entrances and seemingly authentic choke holds, dropkicks and piledrivers create the mania that fuels this bustling branch of show business.

It took LaCount an entire year to cast this show, but it was time well spent. The ensemble gives the production its heart and humanity while making you feel like you're in a wrestling arena getting a glimpse behind the curtain.

You never feel like you're watching a play. You cheer for the good guys, scowl at the bad guys and hoot and holler any time you feel like it.

Rarely does an entire cast turn in stunning performances, but this troupe collectively delivers brilliance. And they learned to wrestle like champs!

Ensure you're on the same page in your relationship

Not all roads to romance offer a clear ride. Sometimes the signs are harder to read than others. As Emily Maynard, this season's Bachelorette, handed out roses, the message was pretty clear: stay or go. But short of gathering for the ABC show's famous rose ceremony, is it possible to miss the message? Might an important lane shift have taken place that you somehow didn't notice? And what can you do to protect yourself against the turbulence of an unexpectedly bumpy ride?

Take for example, Lucy, who came to me for advice. She was dating a guy named Adam with the usual excitement and reservation that comes at the start of any promising possibility. But Adam took off, gaining speed faster than she expected: telling her how much he liked her, wanting her to meet his friends, calling and texting all the time. Since she liked him too, she joined in and went along for the ride. Before she knew it, though, she was ahead of him, and he had slowed down, suddenly saying he couldn't keep up with her expectations. Because he continued to stay connected, she didn't realize what that might mean. So she kept going at the same momentum. And then she didn't hear from him. That was two weeks ago.

She was angry, and didn't understand what had happened. How can you make sure you don't get ahead of the relationship, particularly if one person is coming on strong? Before you let yourself go full-steam ahead, you might want to build in a few speed bumps for yourself. There are some people who jump into a relationship fast, and then want out fast, and you want to protect yourself from getting too attached if there is the chance that person could burn out.

You can do that by being aware of when and how much of your feelings you share. If they say they like you, you can reciprocate with an, "I like you too, let's see where this goes." If they want you to meet their friends, suggest you get to know each other a little better first. Build a foundation under the two of you before getting carried away.

When Adam told Lucy he couldn't keep up with her, it was the equivalent of the Bachelorette's not offering a rose. It just took her a little while to realize it, and by then she was halfway down the highway and looking forward to the road trip. Once you're there, it's harder to come back.

Terrorism doesn't belong to Muslims

After the shootings in Colorado and Wisconsin, it is high time to realize that Muslims are not the only terrorists we have to worry about, but there are many other dangerous, home-grown terrorists right here who are ready to strike at any time. The government is focusing only on a certain community and people with certain looks; it's wasting the time and money, but failing to detect the real threats right under its nose.

Show us the witch certificate!

I totally disagree with Mr. Murphy's opinion that Obama will go down as the least qualified and worst president in history. Since day one of his presidency, there has been an open witch hunt being carried out against Obama, and I think if you look deep enough into its origins, you'll find an ugly, well-known motivation which seems to show up time and time again. I think Obama has been doing as well as he can be expected considering the conditions in which he inherited his presidency.

JONATHAN PERRY, VIA E-MAIL

Romney does share the wealth, actually

In response to the criticism, disguised as a question, that Mitt Romney doesn't give back: Over the past two years, he made $7 million in charitable donations. According to his last two tax returns, he donates 14-17 percent of his income to charity. The average person in the same income level as Romney donates 6.5. Besides the church, Romney donates to the Center for the Treatment of Pediatric Multiple Sclerosis, the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and his alma mater. Not agreeing with candidates on the actual issues is fine, but we shouldn't allow our opinions to be clouded by generalizations of who someone is because of his or her political party. Did Democrats complain this much about John Kerry's wealth when he ran?

Granary not your ordinary Irish pub

► The folks that brought you the Purple Shamrock and the Black Rose have a bar of a different color ► Greater Faneuil Hall needs a place like this

Considering the pedigree of the Glynn Hospitality Group, the people behind such bridge-and-tunnel faves as the Purple Shamrock and the Black Rose, you might be forgiven for expecting another beer-sodden mess at their latest opening, Granary Tavern. You'd be wrong. The exceedingly handsome space is a big step forward. That's the idea, says Travis Talbot, spokesman for the group's bars, which also include Dillon's and Clerys.

"Glynn Hospitality Group is very successful at creating iconic bars, creating that pub, Irish bar atmosphere where the food has always been an amenity," he says. At this venue, they didn't want to be like "other nightlife bars in town, competing for the same audience."

Instead they wanted to appeal to a broader group of families and businessmen, as well as the nightlife and post-shift hospitality crowd from the neighborhood's bars and hotels, with "a food-forward concept that still maintains a high-energy atmosphere." For the most part, they've started on the right foot.

The design aids in establishing a more refined tone. It's split into two levels with bars on both. It's dark and perfectly lit, with huge old beams reclaimed from a barn in Vermont, and dangling filament bulbs where, if you squint your eyes just right you might be able to imagine the space as it looked when it was first built in 1816, give or take a few flatscreens. Downstairs, in what they've been calling the "man cave," the walls are made of huge granite blocks they found while excavating. It actually used to be the border of the pier, when the waterfront reached what is now the Greenway.

Instead of bothering with the cocktail menu (see sidebar) drink through beer options like the local offerings: Slumbrew Happy Sol, Angry Orchard Cider, Notch Session Ale and Grey Lady IPA. Canned options like Porsklap and Brooklyn Lager are a welcome surprise as well.

For the most part, when a bar or restaurant tries to be everything to everyone, they end up pleasing no one. While this isn't the type of crafty cocktail outpost I'd usually frequent myself, I'm happy to see them inching the touristy wasteland of greater Faneuil Hall in the right direction.

Hipster-hop

The Songza dictionary defines Hipster-hop as such: Hip-ster-hop (noun): 1. What you get when you pair an MC with progressive, often synth-heavy production. 2. The solution for bridging the musical gap between the indie kids and the hip-hop heads at your next party. So get thee to www.songza.com/listen/hipster-hop-songza and www.metro.us/songza to check out banging tracks from obvious heroes like Jay-Z and Kanye and lesser known acts like Birdman and Theophilus London and Solange Knowles, pictured below.

— Songza is a streaming platform that mines years of music history and today's music blogs for the best gems, so you don't have to. The company, which calls itself a music concierge service, offers thousands of expertly curated playlists for free on the Web, iPhone and iPad. Each week Metro and Songza bring you fun new playlists.

Bring on the butter!

► Summer Restaurant Week and the 100th anniversary of Julia Child's birth are great excuses to indulge
 ► These places bring you the pleasures of the table

If Summer Restaurant Week weren't enough, this month adds the centennial of American culinary icon Julia Child, who would have been 100 on Aug. 15. A national celebration of the Cambridge habitue, who died in 2004, gives chefs an excuse to dig out her recipes and bring on the butter, bring on the cream!

The atmosphere at Aquitaine in the South End echoes the beloved Parisian brasseries where Julia found her passion — food. Aquitaine and newer this month, too. Most prices range from $22.12 to $43.12.

Back Bay French outpost Clio isn't doing Restaurant Week, but in memory of Child, it adds specials Roquefort gougeres — choux pastry puffs wrapped around that king of sheep's milk cheeses — and a classic sole meuniere — that is, sautéed in butter — with oyster emulsion, lemon balm and flowering squash. Asian-themed sister restaurant Uni takes up the slack with Restaurant Week menus.

Harvard Square's UpStairs on the Square combines Summer Restaurant Week and a tribute to Julia by including her dishes on both its Soiree Room and Monday Club prix fixes. The event starts on Child's birthday and runs through the end of the month with classics such as French cut bavette steak in a shallot and Chenin Blanc butter and a dark, rich mousseline au chocolat with port poached cherries and chantilly cream. As Child would have said, bon appetit!

Jane's prediction

► Perry Farrell talks about saying the right thing perfectly and how it makes all the difference in the world ► Singer also shares his innovative idea for the Hollywood Walk of Fame

Perry Farrell has been a rock star down. After all these years, the public face of being in a rock band is second nature to the Jane's Addiction frontman and Lollapalooza auteur.

"I learned something from Tim Leary," he confides and we sit up prepared for something juicy from the psychedelic guru.

Not so, Leary it seems was all about the business.

"He told me that really what you're after is a sound byte," says Farrell.

We are?

"If you can have one sentence, a 30-second sound byte that sticks in people's minds, then you've done your job."

We have?

"That's what everyone is looking for, that's what the interviewer wants. So, when I speak to people it's almost like I'm writing poetry, like I'm writing a sound byte that will be memorable!"

Have we had ours, we wonder as we're now halfway through the interview?

"I think we did something pretty remarkable, talking about the Walk of Fame and the RF chip," interjects Farrell.

He's right; earlier Farrell talked about Jane's Addiction's inclusion in the 2013 inductees to the Hollywood Walk of Fame. He has an on-trend interactive idea for Jane's star — and perhaps the future of the famous sidewalk stretch.

"I'd like to put an RF [radio frequency] chip in our star, so that when people walk over our star they can hear music or see pictures on their phone. I've got to approach the board about it, but it would revolutionize the Walk of Fame."

Theatre of the Escapists

The third leg of the North American Theatre of the Escapists tour takes Jane's Addiction out of theaters and into bigger and often outdoor venues.

"The plan was to tour the great theaters of America," says Farrell. "Along the way we got offers to do festivals and we took a couple of bigger gigs along the way. Theaters are expensive to play with this full production, so this offsets some of the cost."

rock and roll future, and its name is Bruce Springsteen," he couldn't have had any idea that his very quotable hyperbole could be turned on its head nearly 40 years later. At 60-something, the Boss has shown no signs of stopping: The most recent show he played, on the European leg of the Wrecking Ball tour last month, was the longest show of his career (33 songs in four hours and six minutes). It is tough to call a 26-year-old a veteran in any sport. But when you are Allyson Felix, who burst onto the Olympic scene in 2004 as a gawky 18-year-old and had never won an individual gold medal, 26 can feel very old.

Felix threw that 800-pound gorilla off her back last night as she claimed gold in her signature event — the 200 meters.

Felix won silver in both Athens and Beijing in the 200 meters, finishing behind Jamaican Veronica Campbell-Brown both times.

"I thought back to the disappointment in Beijing. It's been a long road. I never wanted to give up," Felix told reporters after the race. "It's been a journey, but you can't lose sight of your dream. It's just awesome; I've wanted it for so long. This moment is really priceless."

Felix won the 200 meters with a time of 21.88. She was the only woman in the field to go under 22 seconds and is the only woman this season to go under it as well.

Felix had set her sights on winning the 200, even though she qualified for the final in the 100 meters and finished fifth.

"To get on the podium will be so emotional," Felix said. "I mean finally."

She was joined on the podium by fellow American and 100-meter silver medalist

May-Treanor, Walsh win third gold

Misty May-Treanor and Kerri Walsh re-teamed in 2011 with one goal in mind: win their third straight gold medal.

They made it look easy yesterday as they dispatched fellow Americans April Ross and Jen Kessy in straight sets in the gold medal match.

Unlike in Athens and Beijing, the two were not favorites. Walsh had taken time off from the sport to have two children and May-Treanor had played with a new partner.

But the magic was there at Horse Grounds Parade as they came out on top. METRO

Three events to catch today:

► Usain Bolt and Yohan Blake hit the track for the last time individually as they compete in the men's 200-meter final. Like the 100m, they are the heavy favorites. Bolt holds the world record, but Blake beat him at the Jamaican trials. The final is at 3:55 p.m. ET.

► The U.S. women's volleyball team faces South Korea at 10 a.m. ET in the semifinals. The U.S. is the No. 1 team in the world and defeated the Koreans 3-1 in the preliminary rounds. They should advance to the gold medal game.

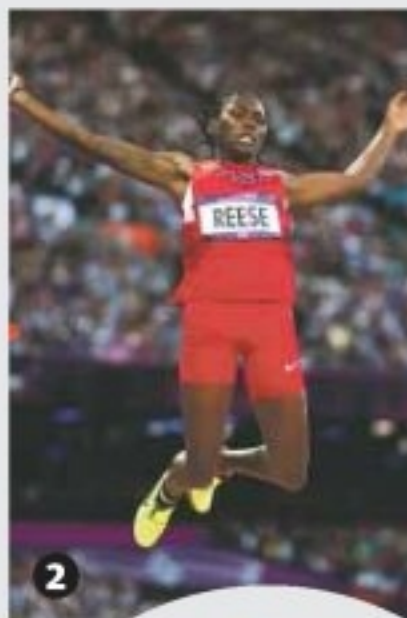

► One of the highlights of the entire Olympics should be United States vs. Japan in the women's soccer gold medal match. Japan beat the U.S. in the women's World Cup final on penalty kicks last summer. Alex Morgan, Abby Wambach and crew look for revenge at 2:45 p.m. ET.

● MARK OSBORNE

The games in pictures

- 1 American Aries Merritt upset world record holder Dayron Robles to win gold in 110m hurdles.
- 2 Brittney Reese took gold in women's long jump, while U.S. teammate Janay DeLoach won the bronze.
- 3 Ireland won its first medal of the Olympics as Cian O'Connor took bronze in equestrian individual jumping.
- 4 U.S. BMX rider Brooke Crain had to be helped off the course after a nasty crash in qualifying.
- 5 Natalya Antyukh won gold in the women's 400m hurdles as she barely edged out American Lashinda Demus.

► Defending AFC Champion Pats back on field tonight ► First glimpse at team many predict will return to Super Bowl ► Question marks as to offensive line, secondary, defensive end

Three things to watch in the Patriots first preseason game against New Orleans at Gillette tonight (7:30 p.m., WBZ):

1 WELCOME ROOKIES

The Patriots pleasantly surprised many by drafting two big, powerful rookies in the first round in Syracuse defensive end Chandler Jones and Alabama linebacker Dont'a Hightower. Both rookies have had impressive camps thus far by all accounts, with many believing that Jones can already start for the Pats. Patriots fans will get their first real chance to see them go live, and what better way to begin their pro careers than by trying to stop Drew Brees and the Saints? Defensive back Tavon Wilson also has had a solid camp and should get decent burn, and look for undrafted running back Brandon Bolden to get some snaps. Jake Bequette has been quiet thus far in camp.

Backup quarterback Ryan Mallett completed 12-of-19 passes for 164 yards and a touchdown in the Patriots preseason opener last year against Jacksonville.

2 OFFENSIVE LINE ISSUES

There are a lot of question marks surrounding the Patriots offensive line going into tonight's game, and it could make what will be a short outing for Tom Brady even shorter. Always-reliable left tackle Matt Light has retired, All-Pro left guard Logan Mankins is still recovering from off-season surgery, and All-Pro right guard Brian Waters has yet to report. O-line mainstay Sebastian Vollmer missed practice on Wednesday, too.

3 ON THE DEFENSIVE

The Patriots should improve upon their 31st ranked 'D' from last season. Devin McCourty and Ras-I Dowling look to start at opposite ends at cornerback, and it will be interesting to see what a healthy Dowling can do and if McCourty can rebound from a down sophomore year. Pass rush is still a concern as well, so be on the lookout for any rookie defensive ends that make noise.

The cold, hard football facts

A look at the NFL through the eyes of the stat experts at Coldhard-football-facts.com:

- 5,000-yard club
Tonight's New Orleans-New England preseason game in Foxboro marks the first time that two 5,000-yard quarterbacks will face each other in a pro football game, preseason or otherwise. Saints QB Drew Brees set the single-season passing yards record last season, while Patriots passer Tom Brady was right behind him. The tandem owns four of the eight most prolific passing seasons in NFL history. The Top 8:
► Drew Brees 5,476 (2011)
► Tom Brady 5,235 (2011)
► Dan Marino 5,084 (1984)
► Drew Brees 5,069 (2008)
